8. Feature: The good, service, or construction has the following unique features, characteristics, or capabilities:
see attached sheet

9. Essential features. How the unique features, characteristics, or capabilities are essential for the agency to accomplish its work: MFCU is in need of surveillance equipment to be used in covert investigative operations. The equipment will provide the ability to record audio/video evidence of criminal activity to be used in case prosecutions. An Officer Safety Transmitter (OST) is needed so that support personnel can hear what is being said and can determine if the undercover officer is in need of immediate assistance. The Repeater is needed to boost the signal of the OST, especially in areas of high concrete/metal density which limits the effective range of the OST.

11. Alternate source. The following other possible sources for the good, service, or construction were investigated but do not meet our needs because: This commercial unit has protection built in for the digital data and cannot be tampered. This unit also has a special storage unit that does not generate unnecessary noise making it safer for undercover work.

TAC COM™ 2005 Audio Repeater

Portable Audio Repeater

Rechargeable, Portable System

The TAC COM 2005 is a portable 2 Watt VHF FM tactical repeater capable of receiving and transmitting both 12.5 KHz and standard wideband (+25 kHz signals). Both the receive and transmit frequencies are user-programmable within a 2 MHz range and can be set to any of eight switch selected channels for both RX and TX. Minimum separation between receive and transmission frequencies is 3.5 MHz.

Programming cables and software are available as an option. The 2MHz range and factory preset frequencies are listed on a label on the TAC COM 2005.

The TAC COM 2005 repeater is housed in a rugged, water resistant, Pelican case and is designed to operate over a wide temperature and humidity range. Both transmitter and receiver sections are frequency synthesized and both are locked to highly stable temperature compensated crystal oscillator (TCXOs). The repeater will transmit continuously for over 3 hours on one charge of the internal battery.

The TAC COM 2005 has special features that extend its capabilities for surveillance operations. These include a Phono Output for direct connection from the receiver to a recorder, an optional Hot Mic for full time audio signal transmissions, and an optional scrambler to protect any of the TAC COM transmitted signals from 3rd party interception. In addition to these options, the TAC COM is capable of connecting with an array of directional and covert antennas through the use of its standard BNC antenna connector.

SOLE SOURCE JUSTIFICATION & WARRANTY INFORMATION

Adaptive Digital Systems, Inc. is the sole source manufacturer and direct distributor of the EAGLE8, MICROEAGLE, MICROFLEX, MICROFINCH, HAWK, SD-RAVEN, RAVEN, RAVEN-RX series, and FALCON family of covert recorders. In addition, the WRIS, IP-LINK and optional Officer Safety Transmitter (OSRFT), support microphones, ULVGA, VERSACAM and NANOCAM cameras, complementing Digital Recorder Support Units (DRSU/PDRSU3), REMOTE ON/OFF, IRMOTION, USBI module, Field Support Unit (FSU) and the SCRIBER system, are also manufactured and distributed by ADS. The listed products are exclusive designs and are only manufactured, advertised and distributed by ADS. The hardware and software is proprietary to ADS.

Commercially available recorders are not applicable for surveillance operations for a number of reasons. The key ones are:

- There is no protection built in for the digital data, hence in court the evidence can be questioned as to having been altered
- Commercial units normally do not consider range of operation, with poor audio range and in video, the resolution of the camera is low, hence facial recognition is hampered
- Some commercial units use rotating media for storage. The noise generated by such devices makes them unsafe in undercover work
- Commercial units would tend to be larger in size, typically 2X, making their use in undercover operations inherently unsafe

Our recorder technology has been around for over 23 years. We have over 35,000 video / audio units in the field. Federal, State, Local and even courts overseas have examined and have had no problems with our recorders because of the evidence protection we put into it and because of the technology and the procedures we use.

ADS made equipment carries a standard warranty for the life of the product.

Note! Our products are only sold to Federal, State and Local Police agencies.

Any questions with regard to this matter should be addressed to the undersigned.

Sincerely,

Attila W. Mathe, President
